Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, November 8, 2003 – 10:00 a.m.

Losing yourself in God, forgetting yourself in Him, to become one with Him, that is the apotheosis, the supreme joy to which your hearts aspire. All that each of you undertake in this spiritual quest that has brought you to us only aims for that: total and perfect union with the Divine. Our faithful aspirants know this well. They feel this call without really defining it, and yet they are advancing, climbing on the path leading them to the peak of the sacred mountain as evoked in the esoteric literature. This peak to be reached is within them; their journey made them become aware of this fact.

The only true richness lies within them; it is enough for them to discover it and honour it as is proper. The spiritual heart is the centre of the being, it is connected to the Source. Approaching it is a slow process, and our system is a good means of succeeding in that approach. It is enough to go up the spiral towards this centre, which is the culmination of the process. At that stage, it continues in a different way. It follows different channels of more subtle energy, divinized and defying expression in human language. Following the channel, with faith and ardour, allows for every hope of success. Be well aware that the main thing takes place there, at the level of this heart, the sacred temple already mentioned in these words, where the purest alchemy occurs until the supreme outcome. Be centred on this blessed place. Let joy dwell there, let it transcend everything and make each of you minimize the risks of your lives on Earth.

The joy of existing beyond this one, of living to love, to grow stronger in this love, to be thankful and to serve – that is what each one can do in their own way.

Think about it. Be blessed in this endeavour.
