Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, July 8, 2003 – 9:00 a.m.

My dear son, only appearances separate us, our vibration is in your heart, it motivates and inspires it. You are not isolated and are not far from us, contrary to what human beings generally believe. Our worlds are juxtaposed; ours fosters the best aspects of this one.

Our beings vibrate on a different frequency, yours is close to it. The difference enables you to exist on this Earth and to act according to your mission.

You know all the above, which is not the case with everyone.

Your loved ones are waiting for you. You will renew your ties with them when that time has come. You are bound to the material world, and you must remain bound to it a little longer.

The Mission is being structured beyond its starting point in India. It is being established in other climes where practices and the approach to the Divine are different, but its effectiveness knows no borders.

We must adapt to these unfamiliar ways of being: Sahaj Marg's integrity remains constant wherever it may go. In spite of appearances, all humans are brothers and sisters. Their hearts follow the same trajectory. They need the same system and an assiduous practice to obtain the best.

Whatever their race, the principle is effective. It is up to them to persevere on the road to wisdom. It is necessary for them to return to the source, to the soul seated in their hearts, in that space that is unfathomable and so subtle that it remains hidden from their eyes.

You carry the good word, my son, and you do better than that, you take action, as we can do in our way. Cleaning is of primary importance. How can one progress without it? You have the power of the great. It is up to you to proceed. We bless you.
