Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, April 22, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

My daughter, you are advancing in spite of the difficulties that you have constantly overcome throughout your life. If you take stock of the situation, you can see how much faith has helped you. What would you have become without it? Your existence has been transformed by it.

Without this refuge, how can humans cope? Ordeals are a part of the game, they are necessary for their evolution. Without them, people wouldn't be able to grow in a satisfactory way.

They must learn lessons that enable them to open their eyes to the reality of their existence. Life represents a teaching, the most useful there is and the only one that remains with them beyond this incarnation.

Fully understanding this principle is a crucial asset, and to always behave in accordance with this truth is another.

This is the best and most constructive thing we can wish you all for the success of your lives.
