Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, April 23, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

You are going through a difficult period and we will not overburden you today.

You all have such a mass of messages to read, re-read and, above all, to decode, that we can slow down.

Over time, if you take up reading them again, other truths will appear to you that had escaped you. These writings are richer than they seem; it is up to all of you to discover them according to the aspirations of your heart.

We try to give you the essential, so as not to overwhelm your minds with details or descriptions to satisfy your curiosity; that is not our objective. We prefer to remain within the limits of what is necessary for your progress. This must take place slowly but surely. We want the best for you and, above all, to spare you from disappointments.

We do not promise you 'everything'; without effort on your part, who could offer you this result?

You accept the rules we propose, and you follow them by doing the work that's required of you. We are following you and helping you all as much as is possible.

The combination of these respective commitments will give you the best results.

Be confident in yourselves and in us; your aspirations will be fulfilled.
