Beloved Master
Revered Babuji Maharaj

Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, April 24, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

My dear son, our union is complete and perfect, what more could be needed? The time that still stands between us doesn't count. You will be so happy to note, the day you come to join us, how positive your action has been. We will then be able to continue to work together towards the realization of our grand design.

My dear son, time doesn't count, only achieved results are important.

We will laugh together at all the wrangles, those difficulties you are confronted with and that deeply affect you. You can't imagine how derisory all this will seem to you, compared with eternity. This passage on Earth is a great trial, even though it was chosen for a specific purpose. One must then accept it, with human means adapted to this world and therefore corresponding to human norms. You have gone a long way, fruitful and wise; it remains for you to complete your work, and all will be well.

I will be close to you, especially during this celebration.

Babuji