Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, April 25, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

My dear daughter, your life is exemplary on this point: you sanctify yourself through suffering. That can be wrongly understood; we have nothing to do with this life choice; it is yours. Mine also went the same way, which is not unique in this world. Each one's life path takes on different aspects; they are suited to the desired results; nothing is asked that is not possible. Grace accompanies the hardest ordeals; they are, as we said, blessings reserved for humans. It is difficult to consider them from that standpoint without being fully aware of the higher interests.

We will therefore address once more the issue of surrender; it alone can save one from the despair that takes over a being in the most difficult moments of their life. Humans advance, most of the time, without understanding or ability to imagine the reason for the difficulties that stand in their way. This principle is rather disconcerting for an uninformed soul.

It takes so much faith, surrender and courage to succeed in this journey with as few mistakes as possible!

Only love can lead one to consider this difficult reality as belonging to a principle of evolution aimed at one's own liberation.
