Thursday, April 26, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

The Medium: Babuji, let me serve you always more and better.

You are serving, my child, what more do you want? Be satisfied with the current status.

Being of service in our way means, primarily, to do one's abhyas correctly. To work for oneself is to work for the multitude.

None of you should forget this principle, which perhaps does not seem obvious to you. All sacred texts more or less echo these comments, formulated in another way. Without dwelling on that and giving you complicated explanations that are not in line with the style of these messages, we will simply say that all harmonious vibrations emanating from a heart in meditation, as well as thoughts of love and all that elevate your thoughts, benefit all your brothers and sisters. It is a well-established rule.

Think of the multitude of beings who meditate every day, devoting time to this practice, and who pray for the good of humanity. This egregore is powerful; it constitutes a force that neutralizes the effects of another force, one that is negative.

That is how your sadhana elevates you all, while contributing to a noble cause.

You are, each and every one, beacons illuminating the darkness like the stars in a dark sky.

What could be more beautiful than this beautiful spectacle delighting the human heart? It reveals to the human heart the infinite grandeur of the divine creation.

Babuji