Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, May 9, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

The abhyasis have at their disposal an abundant literature, are they familiar with it? Not really.

Do they nourish themselves with it? Do they try to apply some principles to their daily life? Very few aspirants do so. These latter try to play the game, to imbibe our thought and find in themselves adequate answers.

We hope, thanks to these easy-to-read messages, to integrate this teaching into your daily practice, giving it guidelines on which you can all lean.

Attending to your affairs while remaining connected to the Divine, no matter what happens, must represent a security for you, a means of maintaining an equilibrium as well as inner peace.

This feeling must give all of you the strength to go about your business. You know that within you lies the best, the unassailable, the immutable. This thought reassures you, it raises you above the turbulence of this world and gives you a certain lucidity.

You see life differently, you understand why it's as it is, whereas so many of your brethren rail against it without understanding its purpose and what it really represents.

There is no more mystery for you and, even if you do not grasp all its nuances, life appears less burdensome to you, you are able to manage it, while continuing on your way with a heart full of hope and joy.
