Tuesday, May 22, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

The Medium: Babuji, when will all these ordeals end? I cannot see the end of them. It feels hopeless.

You've already come a long way, experiencing suffering and ordeals of all sorts, that is the lot of humans in general. As far as you are concerned, this choice corresponds to the thirst for progress that characterizes you. Your life's path is such, you cannot escape it

Would you give up this path of yours? Do you have regrets? Would you want to go back? We don't think so.

You have known for a long time that this body, which serves you with courage and dignity, has already done a lot for you. It is in a state of acceptance that you advance from now on. You have the privilege of knowing the reasons for this life that is yours, it is rich in many respects.

What would you have done without this deliberate choice on your part that makes you put spiritual interest at the forefront? The pleasures of this world, which most humans are happy with, would they have satisfied you? We doubt it. Your fellow creatures who do not have this dimension are unable to make up for this lack. It is felt in different ways – sometimes life seems intolerable to them and makes them act in a desperate fashion, even going to extremes.

You, who are lucky to be able to face ordeals with the bulwark of faith, with the certainty of a future, and a hereafter beyond this life, don't lose heart. This stay on Earth is short, everything is relative here below.

Whatever may happen, your heart is protected from all evil. Be reassured and at peace on this point.

Babuji