Whispers from The Brighter World

Mystical experiences are not translatable to other people. One has to experience them personally, to keep the memory and be thankful for these remarkable graces. They do not enter into the register of the senses that are not involved; they are neither identifiable nor easy to explain in human terms.

These experiences are not the goal of one's sadhana; they are given in specific cases and under certain circumstances.

Trust your Master, he knows what he is doing. Each one of you has his or her own path, which has to be followed, quite simply.

It can hold surprises. Grace is of all times; it acts like a balm for a heart that is offered and that calls for it.

In more ways than one, it is destined for you all. Be attentive to its manifestation, you are not forgotten.

Each life, including its experiences, is different; it is unique since it is yours.

Be capable of recognizing the signs it bears and capitalize on each moment for your own fulfilment; lost occasions cannot be made up.

Advance with faith in your personal fulfilment and in God who guides your steps.

You have your own free will, the onus is on you to do or not to do; no one can force anything on you. You are faced with your own destiny – it's up to you to take action on your good intentions.

Let yourself be guided towards the ultimate goal; trust us and the best will be achieved.
