Don't worry, I am here; the source has not run dry and the channel is operational. Can we revert to the usual schedule? The decision is yours.

This transformation we alluded to is in the making. Genetic mutations are a scientifically recognized fact.

A new race of individuals – more capable of coping with the conditions of existence in the future – is settling down on this Earth.

Great upheavals will occur that will modify all current structures. Adapting will be a matter of survival. The good sense of these beings will enable them to face up to things. They will be confronted with new situations; all the reference points of the past will be swept away.

Their amazing perceptions, compared to what exists today, will enable them to be guided and inspired in all circumstances.

A new life will have to be created on foundations bewildering to the most open minds of today. That is the way evolution goes; a radical change is sometimes necessary, when there is no other way out.

All this will not happen overnight. The framework of a new era is being put in place; it is necessary for the future of this planet. The law of evolution must manifest itself at all costs.
