Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, June 13, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

You serve us faithfully, what more could we ask? Thanks to these messages, we have a teaching of a special essence, because it touches hearts.

It doesn't resemble what is in our books, although the objective is the same.

Here, we want to go further by raising awareness in all of you about the importance of your active participation in this process.

Surrendered to the Master's work, yes, but that of each of you is crucial. We cannot stand as a substitute for your will, your rigour and your determination. You need all of these ingredients to effectively conduct your sadhana.

A strict collaboration is necessary between the Master and the disciple. A close relationship of heart, of trust, and of love crowns it all.

You have all made a choice by joining our Mission; it corresponds to your deepest aspirations. You like its sparseness; we do not conform to pomp with rituals, nor do we engage in any kind of staging that can impress people's minds but does not facilitate the desired interiorization that is conducive to our work. You all have gone beyond the need for external demonstrations, songs and group festivities that appeal to some people who find those methods to their liking.

Sahaj Marg is a simple, effective path, divested of superfluity. You have all chosen it and continue to follow it. You are wise people and you will not be disappointed. The results will prove to you all the correctness of your choice.
