Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, June 17, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

Is it a great discovery for you, noticing the behaviour of your fellow humans? Don't expect anything of others, then you won't be disappointed.

Apart from mealtimes, there are other significant moments that you can all share: isn't that the main thing? Appreciate these moments without having regrets, which don't contribute anything constructive.

The important thing is elsewhere, you have understood it for a long time. Focus on what you have yet to achieve: you have a goal to reach and your line of conduct is fully mapped out.

It is up to you to see to it that these numerous messages, which constitute an invaluable legacy, can take flight.

Spare yourself; despite your best efforts, you can do no more than that.

Keep your strength for what is essential. We, who are not fooled by appearances, know that you cannot give more.

Convey to your dear visitors all our blessings.
