Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, June 21, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

My daughter, you have done what we expected of you, we are satisfied, and your Master is too.

You are now in the state of mind of a fervent disciple. Not all of our aspirants achieve this as soon as they enter the Mission. A great deal of work must be done for most of them before they reach this critical point of sadhana.

Full confidence and surrender to the living Master are major assets. It can take a lot of effort to arrive at this stage; total acceptance is not spontaneous among most of our brothers and sisters.

We are happy to see them in this state of mind. When they reach it, the situation is no longer the same. Once this essential point has been established, they can advance in greater serenity.

We cannot force a soul to make a choice; it must decide for itself and act according to its aspirations. When it has reached this decisive stage, it gains momentum and embarks on a very long process, in complete union with the chosen guide.

Another work can then begin, as all resistance is abolished.

Be especially blessed, all of you who have arrived at this culminating point of your spiritual journey.
