Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, June 23, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

My dear daughter, we understand your great weariness. It does not signify a lack of courage; ordeals have plagued you throughout your lifetime. You aspire to calm, to serenity, to living your spirituality in peace. That is what we wish for all of you who are searching and have chosen our way. You must all step back enough to make sure that the spiritual life in you is not impaired in its blossoming. You should also disregard, as far as possible, all the disadvantages related to an incarnation in a body of flesh that undergoes the ravages of time and all the ups and downs due to the way of life on this planet. None of you can be spared of this burden, varying in weight depending on the mysterious karmic laws governing your lives; you must accept it, if possible, without excessive complaints.

You are all doing your best; saintliness is not easily accessible. One has to earn it patiently, with love, as if one is chiselling a rare piece in the eyes of the Almighty, who knows all your weaknesses. However small they may be, efforts made towards it in acceptance and surrender are very important in His eyes. He encourages, He comforts, He helps His creatures grow and pours into their souls a perfume of a rare subtlety that will permeate them forever.
