Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, June 24, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

My dear daughter, do you realize the long way we have come together and all these messages that have accumulated over the passing days? Some are no more than vague memories for you; take the trouble to read them again, you will rediscover them. You have come a long way since our first contacts, and your reading will no longer be the same; it will stir other echoes in you. Do not deny what you wrote, in all simplicity, at the beginning of our contacts. This story, which had outcomes you never imagined, had to have a beginning.

Thus does one inch forward on the path. Your story is that of all ardent hearts who follow us with confidence. We do not promise them that they will reach the goal quickly and effortlessly; in this area, there is no easiness.

As each of you reached the crossroads, you made a choice – you, our aspirants, whom we are guiding towards the highest spiritual realization. May patience never leave you. It is your strength. Your perseverance in the effort is the guarantee of your results.

Each of you has everything necessary for a great success; we guide your steps, and we will lead you all to victory.
