Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, August 15, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

Be surrendered, my daughter. You are moving towards detachment. You have taken a big step, we are very happy.

Remain well united with us in thought. We lovingly watch over you like a fledgling in the nest. Don't do anything rash. Do not let people force their way into your home; this is critical for your recovery. Be at peace.

Think of my son. He, too, is very tired.
