Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, September 5, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

The Medium: Babuji, when I am in contact with you and you tell me beautiful things, it is paradise. When I come back into myself, in this poor Earthly me, all the magic goes – well, almost. Everything beautiful you say concerns the deep part of my being; the criticisms, on the other hand, are rightly addressed to me. Thus the balance is satisfactory.

My dear child, you know how to put things in perspective. It is true that until the end, while incarnate, we must struggle with this human nature, which fights its battle as best it can. The divine self has a life of its own – even if both seem to interfere with each other in certain circumstances – the beautiful and pure part of a being is inviolable and indestructible, no matter what happens.
