Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, September 8, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

My child, I would like there to be a real rapprochement between my son and you; that should be positive.

The Medium: I don't see how that could happen since I don't attend seminars anymore.

Try to be imaginative. Think of modern means of communication.

The Medium: If my head were less tired, I would try to force myself and study these means you are alluding to. I would make that effort for you, but where would that lead us?

To telling him that you share the same love – which in no way detracts from the love you have for him, even if it is different – and that he is your Master, quite simply.
