Thursday, October 14, 1999 - 8:00 a.m.

Love as we understand it is the most important thing in the world. It is the keystone of the entire human edifice. Without it, the Earth would be populated with automats and robots. Evil would perhaps not exist, since in a way it has a counterbalancing effect by highlighting good. Good consists of love only; it is its driving force. If you analyse its manifestations in the least details, they are very many. Certain beings, under cold and gruff exteriors, often hide true treasures of tenderness and love, which really expects to be expressed.

"By nature, man is complex. It is not always easy to assess him, but there is no exception to the rule. God dwells in him and He does nothing but wait for the moment when He will be able to manifest himself. It is very long sometimes, but He is patient and sooner or later, this soul will come to Him, in all its beauty, 'recovered'."

Babuji