How can you still wonder about the reality of our contacts? With regard to my son, there are obstacles to clear; it is normal. His entourage protects him. Do not worry about this and don't react so adamantly. Let go and carry on your way.

"These messages will reach their addressee one way or the other. The 'mission' requires a little subtlety, that's all.

"It is true that we are in a special area. Communication with the beyond is no ordinary phenomenon at a time when distances do not matter any more, when people surf on the Internet and messages make light with space and time by flying from one continent to another on the Web. Our way of exchanging is less impersonal, but unknown to Net surfers. These are the disproportions and contradictions of this time.

"We really wish that a convenient means should be found so that the messages concerning him reach him discreetly."
