Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, September 24, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

There lies the secret – detachment from life's events. Interiorization can really take place only when you are all able to separate yourselves completely from your surroundings, whenever you wish.

One's mind must let itself be disciplined, like a restive horse under the expert hand of the rider.

You must be able to close the door to the world when you see fit, and generally not let yourselves be affected when you are in the movement of life.

It's all about observing your reactions, your behaviours – a work you must carry out – and even if you fall sometimes, never lose heart in the face of difficulty. You will all derive from it extremely tasty fruit and you won't regret your efforts – try!
