Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, October 14, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

Love, as we understand it, is what is most important in the world. It is the keystone of the entire human edifice. Without it, the Earth would be populated by automatons and robots. Evil would perhaps not exist, since in a certain way it provides a balance by intensifying good. Good can only be made of Love, which is its driving force. If you analyse its manifestations down to the least detail, they are numerous. Certain beings, beneath their cold and gruff exterior, often hide real treasures of tenderness and love just waiting to be expressed.

Humans are complex by nature. It is not always easy to define them, but there is no exception to the rule – God dwells in each of them and all He does is wait for the moment when He will be able to manifest Himself. It is sometimes a very long wait, but He is patient, and sooner or later this soul will come to Him, in all its newfound beauty.
