Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, October 21, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

How can one really understand our relationship, my daughter? You yourself still manage to doubt sometimes. We are old acquaintances; the ties of the heart are very strong between us, and no one can change anything about that. Whether it gives rise to doubt, envy or any other feeling, that is how it is. Thanks to this means of communication, we have found each other again, and between the planets where we respectively dwell, distances are abolished.

That can leave one wondering or doubtful, but what does it matter. These messages are real, printed – they are neither hot air, nor an abstraction. The means used is completely contrary to the current techniques we mentioned previously. That is where their originality lies. Open minds must try to understand what they themselves do not experience, and in no way be astonished by the reality of these exchanges between us.
