A Fourth Revelation

Yes, our comments yesterday can be extended to racism. There is nothing sadder, in this period of time when men believe civilisation has reached its highest level, than seeing them tearing each other apart because of differences in races, and ethnic groups being sacrificed because they disturb.

"When will we see wisdom reigning on the Earth and men respecting each other whatever their colour of skin? It is time for an immense mixing to take place and for people from all the continents to mix and learn how to know each other. An enormous work remains to be done even if people's minds have opened up well compared to the last century.

"See in any other person your own brother; learn how to understand his culture, his habits which are not yours. All this should not create barriers. You should be able to see in him what you have in common, what can bring you closer and unite you. Each population group has its own treasures; it is up to you to discover them and to respect them.

"If you manage to admit all this, you will have taken a step towards peace and harmony. It is the frame of mind which must change; tolerance and respect for the other must be established to unite all people."
