Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, October 31, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

I was expecting a conclusion to this third series; we will give it to him. You have all done, each in your own way, a very good job with these messages.

We appreciate and thank you.

That is a material work which is not negligible. The impact on the spiritual level is very interesting; the messages have made you all move forward. Your minds have opened up on certain aspects that characterize human beings in general and concern you also.

They allow you to observe yourselves and analyze behaviour that you can try to modify.

So all this work is positive. By rereading these writings and becoming more steeped in them, you'll be able to measure how far you have come.

What they produce in you will have the same effect on your brothers and sisters who will read them and try to dive more deeply into them. A simple reading is not sufficient, rereading them is better. There is much more depth in them than a first impression might suggest; this is why repetition is necessary.

We give you food for thought; it's up to you to assimilate them as is appropriate.

Perhaps they will transform your lives, if they truly reach their objective – it is up to you to decide.

We bless you all and we will carry on, since the 'heart', unanimously, asks for a continuation.
