Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, November 4, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

Think about what I told you recently; send thoughts of love to your Master, he needs them, especially at this time. Sulochana's beautiful soul already shines in the firmament.

Accompanying a being like him was not easy, but she fulfilled her role by supporting him in his very heavy task.

Her time on Earth was extended as much as possible; now she must continue her journey on other planes of consciousness.

Such is life; you yourselves have no time to lose. You all know where the true values are, it's up to you to take them into account. You should no longer wander; go forward on the right path, following your supreme guide.

It is not given to every human being to know where they are going and where they want to go in particular. You have that advantage and the necessary protection to reach your goal, by being helped.

Following a marked path is a grace. Rejoice at being chosen and give thanks, you can never do it enough, don't forget it. Seeing you all arrive in port will be our greatest joy. Bless you all.
