Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, November 5, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

As Sulochana suggests, we will certainly have to find a means of reaching him directly. She would be happy to pass on a message to her husband. They have journeyed together for so many years and it has not always been easy. We understand your reluctance; the last experience was not very pleasant for you.

We will see what is possible. My son is timid and so demure. A spiritual Master of great stature is nonetheless a man.

Sulochana knows that for a long time you have been thinking of her every evening in the 9 pm prayer. She will help you as much as she can.

My son will feel even more alone, yet he will keep working like a maniac for as long as he can.

My child, don't let yourself be overwhelmed by stress at every turn. Your state of tiredness encourages this kind of reaction. Be strong and face up to things, if you can, for the love of us.

The Medium: You are right, Babuji, I am growing weaker.

You are very tired, but stronger than ever because we are with you.
