Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, November 6, 1999 – 8:30 a.m.

Our connection is perfect and cannot be disturbed by a delay in this appointment.

As for the matter that concerns you, we will try to foster an easier exchange. Do not torment yourself with this, we very much insist on this point. You have enough problems as it is.

You see the paradox, it is easier for you to communicate with the beyond than with my son. For the time being, let us leave him to his sorrow and to recover from this state of mourning.

Then, he will give his all to his work and will travel for the development of the Mission. My joy would be that his wanderings brought him to Montpellier and that the two of you actually met. Yes, my child, we must dream, dreams can bring about positive things.

You must try, in any case, and wait to see what happens.

In some respects you have similar characters, which does not make things any easier.

We will resume later.
