Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, November 8, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

One cannot really define God by means of reason. He is beyond all definition; therefore, we will stick to the same recurring theme. Seek Him within yourselves, with your hearts, in your hearts. It is the only possible way for humans to approach Him, since He is impalpable and cannot really be defined by rational explanations.

For the moment, we will revert to love – the only path that can lead you to Him, make you lose yourselves in Him and live in Him. This fusion alone will take you far away from all reasoning.

Work ardently on this point; your understanding will broaden and take you beyond formulas.

Your questioning is justified and desirable, but the farther you go, the more the answers will arise in you by themselves. You will cast your own light on that reality.

One day you will all see the end of the tunnel, and light will flash before your dazzled eyes. The eyes of the heart and soul will be your best guides.
