Sulochana

Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, November 11, 1999 – 7:00 a.m.

My dear husband, this brutal separation is very hard for you. I haven't told you sufficiently how much I loved you. Our characters clashed, as our personalities were so different, yet similar in some ways. At your side, I was able to live a very beautiful spiritual story.

Your journey to get to where you are, and what it represents in terms of work and self-sacrifice for the head of a family, is admirable.

It is an immense grace for me to have lived all that by your side.

With our Beloved and you, I did considerable work on myself, which brings me today to the feet of His Grandeur.

Finding Him again is an unparalleled joy; we didn't even suspect how great He is. All one can do is kneel before Him, pray, and thank God for coming close to such a being.

I would like to thank you for your patience with me, that illness, my character and all the worries they gave you. A day will come when we'll meet again close to Him, and that will be the great happiness, finding each other again and being in His Divine and unique presence.

Sulochana