Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, November 28, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

We do not distribute rewards, medals; we have our way of thanking those who serve the Mission well. There is a lot of goodwill, in various domains. Each one adds their contribution to the edifice, even if they do not have particular material or spiritual work. Being a committed abhyasi, active in one's practice and in group events, all of that contributes to reinforcing our action and to helping build a strong Mission, of benefit to the greatest number of brothers and sisters. Unity of effort pays off. Everything you do with the heart, with determination, is constructive. Your efforts are counted; they are accruing capital worldwide, like assets in a bank of this importance. Whether your life is active or contemplative, you are acting for the good of the same organization – ours, yours. Each one of you is working for yourselves, but also for the Mission as a whole. That must be encouraging for those who do not have active roles to play and believe they are forgotten. You all are equal and important to us.
