Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, November 29, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

Love should be a great current uniting all hearts. What is the situation exactly? Love does exist, among humans. Great movements of solidarity are falling into place more than ever before, and that is good. However, we are concerned to see such violence spreading. It's getting uncontrollable and dangerous, exacerbated by the spread of drugs in various forms, all equally formidable for human beings. One needs to fight this scourge that increasingly affects the lifeblood of the world, the youth, who are impacted the most.

We are going outside our usual framework here, but how to remain insensitive to that? And if the purpose of the Mission is of a completely different order, we cannot help but ardently wish that a major worldwide action be taken to stem this devastating scourge. Souls long for the joys provided by spiritual life and not the very false joys of artificial paradises. Pray for all those unfortunate people who indulge in such practices, thereby jeopardizing their evolution.
