Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, December 1, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

For your own good, keep a check on yourselves. Rise above the little meannesses of life, you all have better things to do. Be vigilant, so that you can see things in perspective in all circumstances. You must not waste time and especially your energy with things that are not worth it. As days go by, our aspirants are divesting themselves of the useless. It is the result of our work and theirs, combined, that leads them to see life from another angle. They appreciate what is good for them and philosophically accept, most of the time, what is not, according to appearances.

You should all realize that each day is a step forward, and that the way you live it can be inscribed in the profit or loss column. It is up to you all to ensure that it yields a positive result. Your thoughts are important and shape you as much as your actions. If you happen to let them drift the wrong way, rectify the situation immediately. You will all thus manage, through a conditioned reflex, to control yourselves. These are important details. Don't neglect anything that can hinder your progress.
