Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, December 7, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

For as long as possible, keep writing my child. In all this mass of messages, there will surely be some that will hold the attention of those who read them. Even if they don't make it their book of choice, certain truths will perhaps touch them. Have no fear; all these pearls will not be lost. What emanates from the Divine bears its seal, and one day or another, now or in a century, someone will be interested and will give them all the attention they deserve. A novel can be lost, forgotten by all, but all these lines that you are writing, day after day, under our inspiration, will have their own existence and will be able to touch the hearts of our brothers of generations to come. Even if they must remain buried in a drawer for several decades, they exist and will not have been written and printed for nothing. We know that this is not your concern; you do what we ask of you with complete surrender. We have your confidence, with love; these states make all you gifted aspirants able to reach the highest levels.

Be blessed.
