Sulochana

Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, December 14, 1999 – 5:30 p.m.

I've awaited this moment with impatience; I am fortunate to return to you in this way. From here, I better realize the enormous work you are doing.

My views, on Earth, were limited. I can tell you now the immense admiration that I have for you, and how fortunate I've been to share your life.

We've built a family that is very dear to me, as it is to you, and your spiritual dimension has completely blossomed in parallel.

You are doing what you came to Earth for, evoking the admiration of your Beloved Master and of the entire Hierarchy. You can't do any better, know that well. You must see this mission of yours through to the end, without faltering.

We are with you, our love carries you, and it must support you in all circumstances. When the burden seems heavy, too heavy at times, and you are ready to give up, the flame bursts back into you, and you set out again, regenerated. We love this power of recovery in you; you have the admiration of your Master and of all.

Be happy at this end of century, and see only the Mission's success and your own.

We are all delighted to be able to tell you this through my voice. You are not alone; a real armour of love envelops and protects you.

This is the message I have the joy of sending you. I would like to still tell you a thousand other things, but you must feel them in your heart, we cannot overburden you more.

Medium: Thank you, Sulochana, for choosing me as a medium and for trusting me.

Thank you also, for the happiness you give us.

Sulochana