Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, December 17, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

Whatever can make my son happy touches me, you know it. The good channel is found to reach him easily.

Krishna gives him satisfaction. My son discovers his spiritual capabilities, which his role as a father partially concealed from him up until now. It is a very beautiful soul that gives, and will give, a lot to the Mission in the future when he will have the opportunity to show his real dimension. Parents believe they know their children and, one day, they truly discover them, which is not always pleasant.

With regard to my son, his progeny is worthy, it is a grace. He entrusted his offspring to us and he has every reason to rejoice in them. To know one can trust one's children is a comfort that isn't given to everyone.

Be in surrender in the face of all situations. Try, train yourselves in this exercise, it 'pays'.

Our blessings are upon you all, may they comfort you.
