Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, December 17, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

I understand you. I too had to cope with the hassles of everyday life and put up with difficult characters, but that acted as a mandatory anchor on the material plane. There was no question of my being able to glide along at my leisure.

We would like you to be in a more serene state with respect to your housekeeping problems. We hope to see you sort that out soon; there too, a happy medium is required for your balance. We have to preserve your strengths for what is most important, including our daily contacts.

We understand your situation which is not exactly smooth sailing. Be patient, depending on others is never easy; we will manage to find a satisfactory solution for you.

Your energy capital is to be preserved; we are working on that.

Try to finish this year with confidence, in spite of everything.

We will be particularly close to you.
