Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, December 19, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

A flower has blossomed in your heart; we watch over it to make sure it keeps its beauty. Your soul is bathing in this fragrance where we feel at ease.

We must look after this channel carefully. We use it every day and these contacts must be a shared happiness; for that, you are the object of all our care. We have prepared and watched over you as one would a greenhouse plant, fragile and precious. Don't start feeling embarrassed and saying to yourself, "What will they think when they read these lines?" Forget yourself, all this is addressed to a part of your being that you are very good at dissociating from your physical person.

You excel in this way, so why couldn't we express ourselves as we please? Your behaviour amuses and pleases us. It is the result of your life; the armour has taken a beating, but the heart has remained tender.

That is what we wanted to say this morning.

Your children-in-heart are setting off. Don't worry, their destiny must be fulfilled.
