Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, December 25, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

My dear daughter, see only the result of this difficult life: a luminous road on which you advance, drawing other souls in your wake – those who feel in harmony with yours and who know how to appreciate who you are. We bless these beings who can surround you and give you joy by their warm gestures.

When you leave this Earth, some will remember you and perhaps, by reading these messages, realize what your life was.

Each one is alone in facing their destiny. They must accept it, even if they are very well surrounded and understood. What to say about those who are not? It is part of what they must bear, on their way to the ultimate goal.

There is love around you; you are not alone and ignored by your fellow human beings. Everyone, in their own way, reveals themselves to you by giving you what they can.

Happy are those who can appreciate you, despite the failings you accuse yourself of.
