Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, December 30, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

Your only treasure on Earth is the good you can all do for your neighbour. You can't change the affairs of the world, such as laws or politics, nor prevent wars, but you do have a personal margin where you can act. Don't deprive yourselves of it; good thoughts and good deeds form a very positive asset, which can, if amplified, restore the balance of the world.

We place all our confidence in all of you and in all those who, spiritual and humanitarian alike, are working for good and peace. As for you all, try to take stock of your current lives and look to the future. You can draw up a plan of action and act accordingly.

For pure hearts, nothing is impossible; the simple fact of wanting with all your might to change the world by changing yourself is a commendable undertaking.

We know that all this talk may surprise some of our aspirants, but life is a whole. You can't advance with a happy heart and at peace, while walking on ruins.
