Saturday, January 15, 2000 – 8:00 a.m.

No, the source has not dried up yet. We will complete this page, since you are willing. Whenever you lose heart, think of my son, your Master, who also must go to the end of his strength to fulfil his mission on Earth.

That is the case for each one of you. When you reach a certain point in your life, weariness sets in and you endure it. It is human; you all need strong motivations to overcome it, and getting there is an act of faith. You must all fulfil your contract whatever the role you have to play. We have already said it, there are no small roles; every human being has their place here below and is part of a whole made up of seemingly dissimilar elements.

No matter what an individual seems to represent, they have their reason to exist. The Creator has placed them where they need to be to do what they came for. It is not for any of you to judge whether this or that individual is important, since the way you do it is not right. Your measurements and your benchmarks are skewed; therefore, try to rise above human reasoning so as to gain perspective.

Babuji