Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, January 17, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

My dear children, before closing this series, we think it is worth telling you the same things again and again. We want you to be as well-equipped as possible and, like parents that ramble a little, we repeat ourselves, thinking we thus help you to assimilate as many truths as possible.

We carry you all, in a certain way, but your steps must make you touch the hardness of the ground on which you walk. You must avoid the hollows, go around the bumps and choose the terrain that seems safe to you before committing yourselves. The road is long, and even if the sun is shining above your heads, you must make the effort to move forward. No one can do it for you, it is up to you to decide and to take responsibility before you act. We trust you, knowing that your hearts are motivated by the best intentions. If you fall sometimes, we know that you will set out again more determined than before, and we will be there to help you.
