Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, January 20, 2000 – 8:00 a.m.

Suffering is a common feature among human beings; it is a law governing this world. One way or another, it manifests in the life of a being. It is an obligatory passage and we have nothing to do with it, we don't lay down the rules. We too have been subject to them; it's not correct to say that we're maintaining you all in this idea. We ask you to accept what is inevitable, to transcend your sufferings and to be in a state of surrender in the face of trials you have to undergo. In no way do we suggest that you ask for them or aspire to go through sufferings for your evolution. Our teachings don't include anything of the sort.

None of you can change your destiny to your liking. What is good for you is not necessarily pleasant to go through, but that is part of the rules concerning human evolution; it has been so since the dawn of time.

Your stay on Earth is subject to that system; we cannot change anything about it.

We help you in our own way. While advancing with our help, you free yourselves from your chains, which will enable you to escape the cycle of reincarnations.

Do not forget that we only want your good.
