Friday, January 21, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

Masters across the ages have left a teaching that has illuminated the wise, helped those who aspired to be so, and only lightly touched a certain number of others, without giving the least result. These teachings were often misunderstood, distorted, and used for the purpose of power over others.

They became religions, with heavy structures, domineering, and a certain exploitation of the weakest. That is what we must avoid at all costs in the Mission for future times. The same patterns must not be repeated.

My son is restructuring the Mission. It is for him to put in place a system that cannot degenerate by allowing the desire for power of certain individuals to be unleashed, individuals who are tempted to institute strict regulations that are not really in line with the teaching we give you. The method is very simple; nothing must come to weigh down what exists. To structure, yes, but not to transform in the wrong direction. It is the power of a few people that has provoked a good many dramas in the past and continues to do so. Do not forget it.

(Later)

Humans are to be feared. We are afraid that this path, with all its riches, may not in the future be used as it should. Effective barriers will have to be put up to avoid potential drifts.

This is our concern for the present and the future. My son must choose his collaborators judiciously. Many are full of good will, but that is not sufficient. Some would like to innovate to draw attention to themselves, which is dangerous.

He must remain vigilant and surround himself with a few advisers whom he and we fully trust. The Mission is about to reach an important turning point; nothing must be left to chance.

We are guiding him and assisting him in this heavy task with all our love and the trust we have in him.

Transmit all this to him, my daughter.

Babuji