Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, January 24, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

No, the time has not come to bring these messages out of the shadows. There is no need to rush things. That my son be informed about their existence is normal, but it should be left at that.

It is a matter of putting everything in order for the moment and finishing their entry onto the computer, after corrections.

We thank you for completing this work to the best of your ability.

These messages exist; let life decide their future.
