Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, November 24, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

Don't neglect your health, your body is entitled to certain attentions. It is a precious vehicle that needs to be cared for. All of you must consider with respect what has been given to you, even if you don't have an athlete's stamina and an iron constitution.

To enable you to take on this incarnation, everything has been well considered, so accept what you are physically, intellectually and socially. Everything works together to put you in a position to move forward, especially if you play the game.

Be well aware that superiority doesn't exist, except on the surface.

Never overestimate yourselves in relation to others. Each piece of the puzzle has its importance in the construction of the entirety, nothing more; the smallest is indispensable to the whole. If you belong to the elite, rejoice in moderation by carefully considering what we've just said.

Play your part, you will be called to account – or rather, you will be the one to give it. Make sure that the balance sheet is truthful and equalized.

A head of state, a king, a fabulously rich industry tycoon is nonetheless a human being like any other, with their weaknesses and – let us hope, for their sake – with a heart, a soul having genuine aspirations to move on towards celestial greatness.
