Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, October 9, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

The Earth must go through fire for a new world to emerge. This period will be long and painful. Some countries will be more affected than others; it is always the case in such a situation. When hatred compels people, it is difficult to stop them. We are powerless before the magnitude of the movement, resulting from long years of incomprehension on both sides. Religions divide people more than they unite them. Such was not the aim of the great prophets whose mission was to help humanity.

The truths taught have been distorted because they've been interpreted by minds devoid of integrity. There's no war that is just; not the war of weapons and the terror they engender.

You who have all acquired a certain greatness of soul, be moderators in your thoughts and words. Avoid hateful feelings, easy criticisms and judgements coloured by your human condition. Try to be fair and moderate. Cultivate love in yourselves and keep it intact for all your brothers and sisters who are struggling, whatever their side.

They are creatures of God, grappling with the most sinister feelings, and as such they are to be pitied. Have utmost compassion for them all.
