Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, November 20, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

Love opens all doors. Apart from your spiritual life, all of you can verify this around you – good thoughts and finer feelings that you show to others remove barriers. Beware of certain reactions you may have in the presence of unfriendly human beings. Try to offset this attitude with an opposite reaction, otherwise you will reinforce theirs.

Love is lived every day. Try to extend the inner state you experience in your practice to every moment of your life. It is a fairly long apprenticeship, but it pays off. Thus, you will no longer dissociate these two aspects of your life.

You will gain from this, you will face up to events more easily. By responding to aggression with an equivalent reaction, you pollute yourselves. With some effort, you will arrive at a certain degree of self-control. Even if sometimes you lose your temper, you will rectify the situation very quickly.

That will benefit your inner peace, and you will no longer blame yourselves for having overreacted. Plunge into yourselves and find your calm and the serenity that unites you with the Divine.
