Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, July 6, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

Know how to clear the space inside yourselves. Forget your knowledge, that which conditions your daily lives. Be truly surrendered to the spiritual work that must take place within you all.

The criteria of human knowledge cannot enlighten you on the intense and important aspects you are experiencing in your hearts. Be attentive to what you are feeling, but without trying to analyze it on foundations whose rules are obsolete, as far as your evolution is concerned.

We insist on this point to enable you all to simplify your process. Forget learned theories, all that you may have read or learned during your lifetime that has no place in this register.

Approach your sadhana with a heart free of any intellectual discourse. Be open to novelty as you move through the labyrinth of this knowledge, serenely, trustful as a child and guided along an unknown path the richness of which will astonish you all.

Get rid of the useless, the superfluous; true wisdom comes at this price.

Be open to divine inspiration; it doesn't take kindly to having to clear a path heavily cluttered with false ideas and inappropriate principles. Remain vigilant on this point.
